

Scottish Outdoor Access Code

In Scotland, unlike other parts of the UK, we are lucky to be allowed by law to access most land – as long as we do so responsibly. The Scottish Outdoor Access Code outlines how to behave within these rights.

Three key principles:

- Respect the interests of other people
- Care for the environment
- Take responsibility for your own actions

Find out more:

NatureScot has an excellent website, where you can find a full breakdown of the code and what it means to you: outdooraccess-scotland.scot

This site also contains educational resources, with activities aimed at 8-12 and 12-14 year olds: outdooraccess-scotland.scot/act-and-access-code/education-resources

A leaflet produced by NatureScot which summarises the key aspects of the code can be found in your learning pack.

